

Building a Simpler Future for EPR Compliance

The LIFE4EPR project is working towards a more harmonised and interoperable European approach to Extended Producer Responsibility (EPR) registration and reporting. By simplifying procedures and improving data exchange across Member States, the project aims to make EPR compliance more efficient, consistent and accessible for all stakeholders.

Why Harmonisation Matters: The Challenges Producers Face

For producers operating across Europe, EPR compliance can still mean navigating different rules, platforms and reporting requirements from one country to another. LIFE4EPR is analysing these practical challenges to better understand where greater harmonisation could reduce administrative complexity and support more efficient compliance across the EU.
